CMS

CMS stands for Content Management System. CMS is computer software or an application that uses a database to manage all content, and it can be used when developing a website.

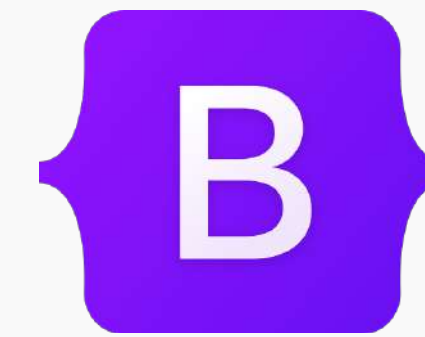

Ecommerce

Ecommerce, or electronic commerce, is the buying and selling of goods and services online. It can take place between businesses, households, or individuals.

Open Source

Open source programming languages are languages where the source code is freely available to the public, allowing anyone to access, modify, and distribute the code, usually maintained by a community of developers under an open-source license.

Front End

Front end refers to the visible part of a website or application that users directly interact with, including elements like buttons, text, images, and menus - essentially the user interface (UI) that a person sees and uses on a website or app.

Mobile

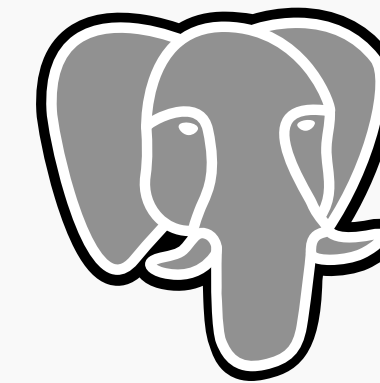

Mobile software development creates the visual and interactive parts of an application that users interact with.

It focuses on designing user-friendly and visually appealing interfaces, ensuring a positive user experience.

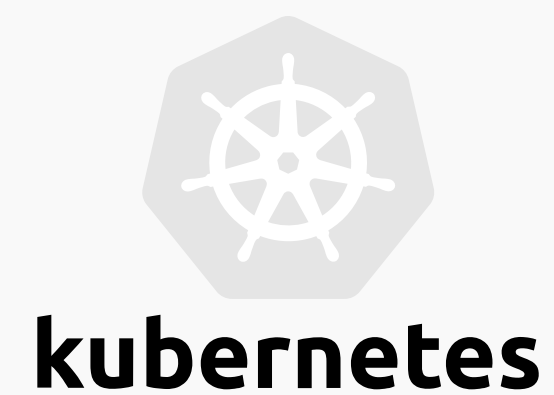

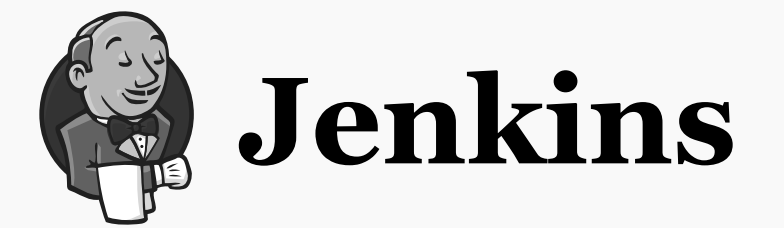

Databases

Database tools are software applications that streamline data handling. They assist in database design, management, querying, visualization, migration, and administration, supporting all stages of data use.
